AUSTRALIA. Francis Chichester, the 65 year old yachtsman, received a great welcome when he arrived at Sydney at the end of the longest-ever single handed sea voyage. The harbour was packed with cheering crowds, and ships by the score sounded their sirens as "Gipsy Moth IV" was towed to her berth. He was joined on board by Mrs. Chichester and their son, who had flown from England. He had hoped to complete the 13,750 mile journey in 100 days, but was delayed by severe gales, which smashed his automatic steering gear, so that it finally took him 107 days. Mr. Chichester told reporters that he was very tired, and disappointed at not achieving his 100 day target. He said the boat was not right for the job, and he often had to stop because the vessel was being so heavily pounded by the sea. He intends to return to England via Cape Horn, thus completing his circumnavigation of the world.

From London, the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Heath, has sent a cable to Mr. Chichester saying "We all admire immensely your skill, courage and determination, and look forward to welcoming you after your return voyage".

WEST GERMANY. A spokesman for the Social Democrat party, which is in the coalition government, has given a warning that West Germany can expect a threefold rise in unemployment by next spring. During a debate on the coalition's first policy statement, the spokesman predicted that by next spring 700,000 people, that is over 3 percent of the working population, will be out of work. In November the number of unemployed was 216,000.

Two prominent Jewish leaders who have just visited West Germany have expressed concern at the threat of neo-nazi-ism there. Dr. Joachim Prinz, one of the leaders of the World Jewish Congress, told a London News conference that the growth of the right-wing National Democrat party (the NPD) has been seriously underestimated in West Germany. In New York, Senator Jacob Javitz said Britain and the United States should be gravely concerned about the rise of the NPD.

NORTH SEA. A German ship is reported to have rescued all the crew of a small British cargo vessel which sank on Sunday night off the Dutch coast. The ship, the 200 ton 'Eldorita', was abandoned by its crew after it foundered in a storm. Dutch helicopters and lifeboats raced to the area in response to distress signals.

GIBRALTAR. Hundreds of people in Gibraltar have sent cables to United Nations delegates saying that they wish to remain British, and they re-affirm their support for the colony's chief minister, Sir Joshua Hassan, who has gone to New York in an attempt to address the UN Trusteeship Committee. Sir Joshua says he thinks Spain is about to try something new to cover up for her refusal to take the Gibraltar issue to the International Court.

SYRIA. It is reported from Syria that the flow of oil from the Iraq oil fields to the Syrian port of Banias has been stopped. The French news agency says that the Syrian minister for oil, Dr. Tutler, personally carried out the operation, in the latest move in the dispute between Syria and the International Petroleum Company over royalty payments. The Syrian government has already seized the company's installations, and banned the loading of tankers at Banias.

THAILAND. Japan has added to her tally of gold medals at the Asian games in Bangkok by winning the team shooting event. Latest reports say that the Japanese still lead the medal tally, with nine gold medals. The individual shooting event was won by Wu Tau Yuan, of Formosa. The first competitor to win two gold medals was the Malaysian Manikawa Sagam Jegepesar, who won his second gold medal in the 200 metres sprint. (We haven't heard what he won the first one in.)

MORE WORLD NEWS.

INDIA. The general secretary of the Indian communist party, Mr. Rajishma Rouw, has been arrested with other communists while on a visit to the troubled state of Behar. The arrests were made in the town of Musafapur, where police opened fire during disturbances on Saturday. A university teacher was killed, and a student is reported to have died from wounds received in the shooting.

The Indian Prime Minister, Mrs. Gandhi, has opened the conference of the International Union of Family Organisations in Delhi. Mrs. Gandhi, speaking to delegates from 27 countries, stressed the importance of family planning in improving the life of the people.

INDONESIA. In Jakarta, the prosecution has demanded the death sentence for the former Air Force commander Omar Dhani, who is accused of complicity in last year's unsuccessful attempt to take over the government. The prosecution alleges that Dhani provided the communists with arms and conspired in the murder of six army generals. Reports from Jakarta say that students have again demanded that President Sukarno himself should stand trial for complicity in the coup. They say he has been implicated by evidence given at Dhani's trial. Other reports say that President Sukarno has accepted invitations to visit Egypt and Yugoslavia. No dates have been announced.

CHINA. China is expelling three of the six Soviet news correspondents in China because she says they have been spreading rumours and slanders about the cultural revolution. They have been ordered to leave before December 25th. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said that the Soviet journalists had consistently engaged in anti-Chinese reporting, and had done all they could to sow discord between China and the Soviet Union. In any case, he added, there is no need for the Soviet Union to have as many as six correspondents in China, because China has only three in Russia.

Reports from China say that the conflict between Mao Tse Tung and those accused of opposing him is becoming sharper, and an article in the communist party's theoretical journal 'Red Flag' says that workers and peasants must now play a much larger part in the cultural revolution, which has hitherto been mainly confined to students and soldiers. A correspondent says it now seems quite certain that the main targets of the revolution are the head of state Nu Shao Ting and the secretary general of the communist party, Teng Shao Peng.

VIETNAM. American officials in Washington have strongly denied allegations that American bombers attacked residential districts in Hanoi. They had earlier acknowledged the possibility of populated areas being hit accidentally in raids on the capital, but now after a close study of photographs and pilots' reports a spokesman has said that the bombs fell only on military targets, and these were all outside the official city limits. The Americans say they think the North Vietnamese themselves are responsible for the destruction of several houses in the centre of Hanoi, when some of their anti-aircraft missiles misfired and fell back into the area. They say this theory is supported by information received from foreign residents in Hanoi. North Vietnam has however repeated that American planes caused the damage; a spokesman said that the buildings hit included the Chinese and Roumanian Embassies. The North Vietnamese press has published accounts of the bombing, in which over 200 civilians are said to have been killed or wounded, along with photographs of wrecked houses.

STILL MORE WORLD NEWS.

VIETNAM (continued)

A United States military spokesman in Saigon has expressed concern at the increased use of Mig fighters by the North Vietnamese, but they are reluctant to attack Mig bases in North Vietnam because this could lead to a serious escalation of the war. He added that the number of Migs involved was estimated at about 75; there was no evidence that they used bases in China. The Americans have announced that 440 of their planes have been lost over North Vietnam since the start of the air offensive in August 1964.

United States heavy bombers from the Pacific base of Guam have attacked a North Vietnamese supply route near the Laotian border. They also raided the demilitarised zone between North and South Vietnam.

President Johnson is having high level talks about Vietnam this week in Washington. He will be seeing the United States Ambassador to South Vietnam, Mr. Cabot Lodge, the Defence Secretary, Mr. Robert Macnamara, and the United States Ambassador to the United Nations, Mr. Goldberg. The President is reported to be still pessimistic about prospects for early peace. He told a group of servicemen wounded in Vietnam " I wish I could say that peace is just around the corner, but there will be long and difficult days ahead, requiring patience and understanding."

KENYA. This week Kenya celebrated its 3rd year of independence, and its 2nd anniversary as a republic. President Jomo Kenyatta entertained guests at a State House garden party after presenting new regimental colours to the Kenya Rifles.

RHODESIA. The United Nations Security Council has been discussing the British call for mandatory sanctions against selected exports from Rhodesia. African members of UN are to meet to discuss Britain's proposals, and correspondents say that as well as calling for a compulsory ban on the supply of oil to Rhodesia they are also expected to want to add to the list of banned exports from Rhodesia. The Foreign Secretary, Mr. Brown, said when he opened the debate last week that Britain would not oppose any amendments to impose oil sanctions if they were made in acceptable terms. The African delegates are extremely angry at reports that Britain is still keeping the door open for any change of mind by the Smith regime.

President Kaunda of Zambia said in an interview with the 'Times' that his country would do its utmost to strengthen the wording of the sanctions resolution. President Kaunda, who is to discuss the matter when he meets President Nyerere of Tanzania, says he wants sanctions that will be effective in stopping South Africa from supplying oil to the Smith regime, and added that he has a deep-rooted suspicion of Britain's handling of the Rhodesia situation.

In Salisbury a spokesman has denied that there is any question of Mr. Smith resigning. He also denied that there was a division of opinion in the Rhodesian cabinet on the talks Mr. Smith had with Mr. Wilson on board HMS Tiger.

In South Africa, where the rumours of Mr. Smith's intended resignation originated, The Rhodesian Mission has stated that Smith has the fullest confidence of his cabinet colleagues.

Two former Rhodesian Prime Ministers have put forward suggestions for ending the Rhodesian crisis. Sir Edgar Whitehead has repeated that what is needed is a long-term union between Britain and Rhodesia, and Lord Malvern has called on the Smith regime to accept the constitutional changes agreed upon during the recent talks with Mr. Wilson. This, he says, would enable Rhodesia to demand recognition of her independence.

Up-to-the-minute-news FROM THE PENGWINGE INTERNATIONAL NEWS ROOM

SANAE : The depot laying party with one muskeg covered the 100kms TO Muskeg Depot and return from the mountains in 6 days arriving back on base last Saturday in the early hours after an excellent trip in glorious weather. All other field parties ~~is~~ doing well. Nothing else to report (except they've got ~~MMK~~ DRIPS too !)

PUNTA ARENAS : A nebulous, unconfirmed report from an American ~~aircraft~~ aircraft crew flying from Punta Arenas states that a climbing expedition is being undertaken in the South Shetland Islands.

RRS"Shackleton" : Shackleton left Punta Arenas on 9th December after a short stay of about 3 hours to pick up a geophysicist to assist in the sea survey at the South Orkneys. From Punta she sailed to Signy And arrived last Wednesday evening and left again on Thursday to do research in the vicinity. At noon today she was 150 miles west of Signy and she has reported no ice in the vicinity of the South Orkneys at all. Shackleton is expected to remain in this area for about three weeks.

RRS"John Biscoe" : Biscoe left Signy for Deception on 7th where she arrived on the 9th (only light pack). She left Deception again on 10th and steamed to Anvers Island where she was due to rendezvous with the aircraft from Adelaide Island. Again little ice was encountered and with good aircraft flying conditions the R/V seems to have been successfully completed on Wednesday/Thursday of this week (this has not yet been officially confirmed). Biscoe left Anvers on Thursday and steamed through the islands back to Deception - again little ice - where she arrived on Friday. Biscoe is now due to do seabourne work in conjunction with the Hi-Fix program in the Trinity Peninsula area.

HMS"Protector" : Arrived Stanley (at last !) on 7th and left again about Monday afternoon and was last reported steaming south towards Trinity Peninsula in a position about 150 miles northeast of Deception.

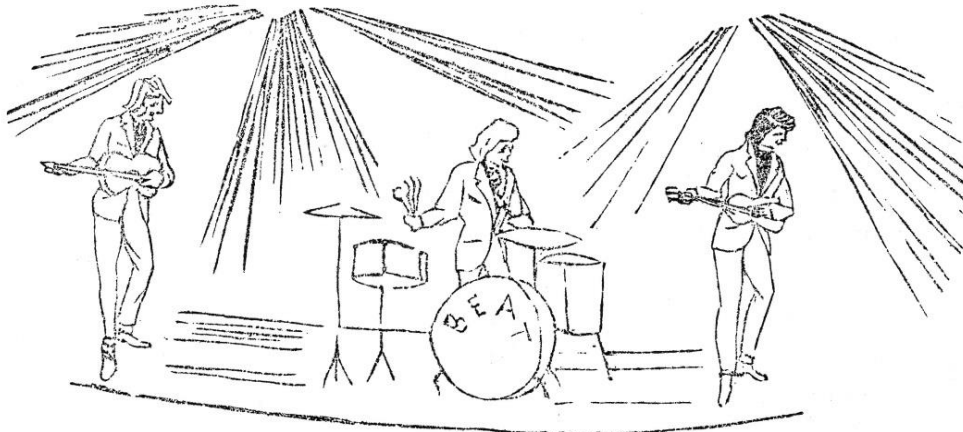

MV"Perla Dan" : Left Southampton on 6th and is now estimated to be about 1800 miles north of the equator.

FIELD PARTIES : Bob and Brian expected back to base anytime, but no contact with them since last Monday. Therons parties all doing well and tellurometer traverse and basic survey program completed, and only sun observations left to be done before the kegs leave for home on 20th December. Both kegs are still together and dog parties back to those expected to remain for rest of season ie Alan and Col with Beatles (doing Survey work) and Dave and Mac with the Hairybrecks who have left to start work in the region of Mt Faraway. Tony and Andy are remaining at Lenton Depot until 20th with the remaining 5 dogs after which they will rejoin the kegs for the return journey.

A group of British gypsies have formed their own Trade Union. At a three-hour meeting in a Kent public house, "The Bull", they set up the British Gypsy Council, which they intend to affiliate to the International Gypsy Committee. One of the people at the meeting was the General Secretary of the Committee, a young lawyer who flew over from Paris. He said at the meeting " For centuries the sea has divided you from your brothers in Europe. We have advanced in Europe, Canada, Asia, North Africa, and even Russia; now you must join us." The British gypsies hope that by forming their own organisation they will become strong enough to win camping sites with running water, and equal rights to education, work, and houses. One of them said after the meeting " At last we are getting organised, for the conditions under which we are forced to live are deplorable." The gypsies won a minor victory when they launched their trade union, for the pub in which they met has a sign reading ' No Gypsies.' The landlord refused to allow the meeting at first, but changed his mind when the gypsies threatened to picket his pub.

A report by a group of judges says that magistrates should be given power to grant bail to accused people more freely than they can at present. The report, by the British section of the International Commission of Jurists, said that many people who are held in custody while awaiting trial are not finally sent to prison, even if they are convicted of a crime. Many people are kept in custody unnecessarily, between the time of arrest and their trial the report says, and this often causes hardship and adds to the overcrowding of prisons. The report also recommends that any time spent in custody before trial should be considered as part of the eventual prison sentence in the event of a conviction.

London's 500 Traffic Wardens, who keep a time check on parked cars, want greater responsibilities. They are asking the Home Secretary, Mr. Jenkins, to give them the power of arrest and authority to take names and addresses. Another request, that they be allowed to direct moving traffic, has already been recommended by a working party which suggested that this would ease the burden on Britain's understaffed police forces.

The Lord Chancellor, Lord Gardner, has said that the police should be relieved of non-essential duties. Speaking to magistrates at Leicester, he said that many detectives were working a 70 hour week, and in some forces a policeman had only one weekend off in seven. In some areas police had to carry the Mayor's mace, and even act as mortuary attendants.

The Press Council, which keeps an eye on newspaper ethics, says it received a record number of complaints about newspaper stories last year, but the number worthy of adjudication by the Council fell by 20 percent. In its annual report, the Council says that some of the complaints were from fanatics, and others from people who were simply mistaken, but the majority were fair-minded and constructive. The Council points out that however much people may disagree with printed statements, NEWSPAPERS HAD INALIENABLE RIGHTS TO SELF-EXPRESSION. THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS WAS FOUNDED NOT ON THE RIGHT TO PRINT NEWS, BUT ON THE RIGHT TO STATE VIEWS.

The Trades Union Congress that workers laid off because others are locked out or on strike should receive unemployment benefit. The proposal was made in supplementary evidence submitted by the TUC to the Royal Commission on Trade Unions and Employers Associations.

The first electronic telephone exchange in Europe has been opened in Ambergate, in Derbyshire. It has been described as the most advanced in the world, and the Postmaster-General said it was the beginning of a new era. A key component of the new exchange is a reed relay. In contrast to conventional systems, this one has no moving parts except for two metal contacts which come together automatically as the telephone receiver is lifted. The new exchange is expected to be so reliable that it will normally only require an occasional visit from a maintenance engineer. Export orders are already coming in.

A leading British cancer specialist, Sir Alexander Haddow, says that for the first time certain rare types of cancer can now be cured by chemical means. The treatment has been 80 percent successful in curing one type of tumour which sometimes follows pregnancy. It can also sometimes cure lymphoma, a form of the disease occasionally found in African children.

The Prime Minister has hinted that the credit squeeze may be eased for the private householder next year. He told the House of Commons that with certain changes in the credit position and the re-introduction of loans to bridge the gap between the sale of one house and the purchase of another, the government expects a big boost in private building in 1967. This remark is being interpreted as a hint that later on the banks may be encouraged to provide money for private building, especially for the small builder.

Radio Caroline has asked to be allowed to come ashore and function legally. This request is made in a document which the owners are sending to the PMG and other MPs. It says that the whole question of local commercial radio stations in Britain should be looked into again. They maintain that if pirate stations were to stop it would take anything up to 2½ years to provide a comparable service.

Gifts from all over the world continue to pour into the Welsh village of Aberfan. Typical is a Christmas card from someone in Durban, South Africa, who asks that the 10/- enclosed be given to a child. These gifts are separate from the contributions to the special disaster fund, which has now reached a total of over £1¼ million. A spokesman for the local Parents and Residents Association said "The people of Aberfan would like to express their appreciation ~~xxx~~ to those who have shown so much kindness".

A Rhodesian has been presented with the Sword of Honour for being the best officer cadet of his intake at the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst. He is 20 year old Jeremy Strong, who received the award at the Passing-Out Parade of cadets commissioned as army officers. Strong, whose father was an officer in the Indian Army, was born in Rhodesia, but said he always wanted to be an officer in the British army.

BBC Television viewers have chosen England's football captain Bobby Moore as Britain's Sporting Personality of the Year, and the team which he led to victory in the World Cup competition this summer gets the team award.
