THE MANILA CONFERENCE. At the seven nation conference on Vietnam being held in Manila, the United States and other countries with troops in Vietnam have said that they will recall their forces if North Vietnam will do the same and if the Vietcong promise to reduce their terrorist activities. A communique issued at the end of the conference says that South Vietnam's allies would withdraw their troops and close their bases within six months of these conditions being met. Meanwhile they will defend South Vietnam as long as aggression continues. South Vietnam says she seeks reconciliation with the North, and will respect the partition of the country until the people of Vietnam as a whole agree to re-unification. She emphasized her plans for including priority for land reforms and social justice.

There was a near riot when hundreds of journalists and photographers were admitted to the ceremony at which the communique was signed. The Press men charging into the room sent officials, diplomats, chairs and tables flying. President Johnson and other leaders retired to another room.

The conference was opened on Monday by President Marcos of the Phillipines, who described it as a council of peace, not a council of war. He stressed the urgent need to improve the economic and social conditions in SE Asia which at present increased the threat of war. The conference, he concluded, could be the first step on the way to attaining their dream of peace and prosperity in Asia.

After the conference, President Johnson paid a surprise visit to an American base on the coast of South Vietnam. He spent about an hour there, inspecting the base and meeting the troops, and was met by the Head of State General Tu and the Prime Minister. Afterwards he flew back to the Phillipines before continuing with final stages of his tour of the Pacific and South East Asia.

The Prime Minister of New Zealand, Mr. Holyoak said that the conference had shown a complete unity among the seven nations taking part, which made it possible to offer the other side a chance to come to the conference table.

The Australian Prime Minister described the talks as very productive, and the President of South Korea said it was a turning point in the effort to bring peace and prosperity to Asia and the Pacific.

In South Vietnam, American troops say they have killed over 50 Vietcong in recent clashes, about half of them in an engagement south west of Da Nang. More casualties were inflicted when they attacked a small flotilla of sampans near Saigon. The numbers of North Vietnamese and Vietcong surrendering has also risen sharply: nearly 750 prisoners were taken last week, including a complete unit with its arms and equipment.

Over thirty American servicemen were killed and several others injured when fire broke out on board the aircraft carrier Oriskany in the Gulf of Tonking. A military spokesman said that the fire was caused by flares which ignited in the ship's hangar bay. The flames were brought under control an hour after the main outbreak, but small fires continued to break out for some hours after as more flares exploded. Another carrier, the Constellation, was standing by and gave medical aid for the injured. Oriskany carries a crew of over 3,000, and has about 75 aircraft.

INDONESIA The former Indonesian Foreign Minister, Dr. Subandreo, has been found guilty and sentenced to death following his trial on charges of subverting the state and crimes against the economy. The prosecution alleged that Dr. Subandreo knew about the plans for the unsuccessful coup last year, but failed to inform President Sukarno. Dr. Subandreo, who had served as foreign minister for nine years until his arrest in March, denied the allegations. He admitted that he had heard rumours about the plot but did not take them seriously.

MALAYSIA. There have been Opposition protests in the Malaysian parliament over the arrest of about sixty people in Malaya in the last few days. There has been no official statement, but a correspondent in Kuala Lumpur says the arrests are part of a police drive to prevent widespread demonstrations against the Vietnam war and President Johnson's visit to Malaysia this weekend. The Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman has said that he will not allow any demonstrations during the President's visit.

The Japanese Foreign Minister arrived in Singapore for a two day visit on Monday. He had a meeting with the Singapore Foreign Minister during which they discussed closer economic ties.

UNITED NATIONS Monday was the 21st anniversary of the United Nations Charter. In a statement to mark the anniversary, Secretary General U Thant said that the Vietnam war is a constant threat to world peace, and peaceful solutions must be found to this and other persistent conflicts.

Lord Carridon, the British representative at the United Nations, has defended Britain's policy in Rhodesia, but many delegates in the Trusteeship Committee were angered by his refusal to disclose the nature of the negotiations going on with the Smith regime. The Ghana representative said that Britain's policies must be making some former Labour Party leaders turn in their graves. Lord Carridon in his reply said that a critical stage had been reached but that it was not for him to announce his government's moves. He repeated his previous assurances that Britain will not agree to any settlement which is not acceptable to the Rhodesian people as a whole, and re-stated the intention to apply for mandatory sanctions should the illegal regime's reply to Britain's latest proposals be unsatisfactory.

CONGO. General Molumba has been relieved of his appointment as Prime Minister and re-appointed as Minister of Defence. President Mobutu has assumed the powers of prime minister himself. The dismissal of General Molumba was expected after accusations against him of complicity in the recent Katangese mutiny in Kisangani.

INDIA. About forty people were killed when an express train struck a crowd standing on the track at a station in the state of Behar. They had just got off another train and were crossing the line when they were hit.

Delhi President Tito, President Nasser, and Mrs. Ghandi who have been having talks in Delhi, have called for an immediate end to United States bombing in North Vietnam. They said that all foreign troops should be withdrawn, leaving the Vietnamese people to decide their own future, and consider that the Vietcong must take part in any talks on the war. They repeated their opposition to colonialism, and expressed support for the people of Rhodesia, South West Africa, Angola, Mozambique, and Aden.

ADEN. A special representative of the Foreign Office has gone to Aden to investigate the conditions of arrest, interrogation, and detention of suspected terrorists. He is expected to be away for at least two weeks, and on his return will make a full report and advise on any way of improving procedures. The investigation follows allegations of torture by British soldiers.

The British High Commission in Aden has banned all passengers on ships in Aden harbour from going ashore during the annual religious fair, which is held near the main landing pier. There have been several grenade incidents in the area in recent weeks, and it is felt that the large crowds which the fair attracts would increase the opportunities for terrorist activities.

In the Yemen, the republican regime has executed seven men, including a former minister and the former deputy Chief of Staff. They were accused of organising bazaoka and grenade attacks, including one on the Presidential Palace. They were found guilty and executed a few hours later. Also one tribal leader was sentenced to life imprisonment and several army officers and men were given prison sentences of up to ten years.

The United States have launched an Atlas-Centaur rocket as a part of their programme to send a manned space-craft to the moon. American scientists say they re-ignited the second stage of the rocket in space, a process which is necessary for many lunar missions, including soft landings.

The chairman of the Intra bank in the Lebanon has been replaced. A statement by the bank said that the chairman, who was abroad when the recent crisis occurred, in which the bank ran out of ready cash and closed its doors, will not be returning to Beirut for the time being. A former government minister, who acted as chairman since the crisis, is to replace him.

The General Conference of UNESCO, in Paris, has voted against the admission of the Chinese People's Republic to the organisation. A United States resolution urging that Nationalist China should remain the sole Chinese representative was approved by 56 votes to 40. There were 19 abstentions.

The Defence Committee of the French National Assembly has called for the postponement, on financial grounds, of the Anglo-French project to build a tactical support aircraft. Plans for building the aircraft, which was due to go into service in 1970, were agreed by Britain and France last year. The French Armed Forces Minister has opposed the move to postpone the project.

President Johnson, on his visit to Thailand, has again appealed to North Vietnam to stop fighting and negotiate. In a speech at a Thailand university he said "I have said to the leaders in Hanoi 'let us lay aside our arms and sit down at a table of reason. Let us renounce the works of Death and take up the task of living'".

The Prime Minister of Thailand says that the United States has agreed to increase the military aid to Thailand by about one third, which will bring it up to about 50 million dollars.

In Malaysia, strong security precautions are being taken in Kuala Lumpur for President Johnson's visit there tomorrow. Many people, suspected of organisation demonstrations, have been arrested, and anti-American posters and pamphlets have been confiscated.

In South Vietnam, an American spokesman says that the big ammunition dump which exploded yesterday near Saigon was set off by the Vietcong, who shelled it with mortars. A United States patrol fired on the guerillas, who escaped without casualties.

Heavy fighting is going on in the Central Highlands of Vietnam, where the North Vietnamese troops have launched five major attacks on American positions in the area. Three American helicopters have been shot down, and heavy bombers from the island of Guam have attacked North Vietnamese positions.

Several villages in Central Greece have been wrecked by an earthquake, in which 1 person is reported to have been killed and about a dozen injured. Over 1,000 people are homeless, and the collapse of a bridge has cut off communications between two towns about 160 miles north west of Athens.

NEWS ABOUT BRITAIN.

SOUTH WALES. Sir Edmund Davis is to head the enquiry into the Aberfan disaster. He was brought up in a Welsh mining community, and went to school only a few miles from Aberfan. He speaks Welsh, and has held a senior court appointment in Merthyr Tydfil, where the enquiry is to take place. He also presided at the Great Train Robbery trial 3 years ago. He is quoted as saying "There will be no white-washing. If there is blame shown then blame will be cast. If it is revealed that certain bitter lessons had been taught by the disaster then it will be up to the government to implement the enquiry's recommendations as they think fit."

Lord Robens, chairman of the National Coal Board, said all the other coal tips in South Wales - about 500 - are being examined for signs of slipping.

The British Council of Churches, which represents all the major Protestant denominations, has been discussing the report of their Study Group on sex and morality. The chairman of the study group said the report did not express approval of intercourse outside marriage - what it did say was that real morality consisted of men and women picking out their own responsibilities. The Church of Scotland said that the Council should repudiate the report, and described it as 'a council given in the Name of Christ which might lead people to the brink of Hell'.

A Bill has been introduced in Parliament to amend the present divorce laws in England. It has been introduced by the Labour member Mr. Anstey, whose earlier bill making homosexual acts between consenting adults no longer a crime has recently been published. This bill will allow a marriage to be ended when the husband and wife are "irreconcilably estranged" and hate each other. He said he did not believe in easy divorce, but where the spouses hated each other there was not a stable, sound marriage, and it should therefore be terminated. At present this could only be done if one committed adultery, or on grounds of desertion or cruelty.

Three prisoners who escaped from Wandsworth prison on Monday have been recaptured. One was arrested at Eden Bridge, in Kent, and later another was found less than 20 miles away in a house in Sidcup. After the second man had been taken to a police station police returned to the house and found the third man climbing down from the loft.

The British Legion is worried about the fall in the number of people willing to sell poppies this year to aid disabled servicemen and their dependants. The artificial poppies are made by the disabled men themselves, and are sold on Armistice Day. They are intended to represent the flowers of the battlefields on the Continent, where many servicemen fell during both wars.

The chairman of an association which represents about 3,000 hospital doctors has said that unless their working conditions improve there is a serious danger that the hospital could collapse in many parts of Britain. Dr. Patrick O'Kelly said that this could happen in less than a year. More than a thousand doctors have applied to sit an examination which qualifies them to work in the United States. The association wants a limit to the number of hours on duty, and a reform of the career structure. It has called in a firm of management consultants to see whether a doctors training is being wasted in jobs which could be done by other people.

In Northern Ireland a crowd of about 8,000 attended a rally called by the Rev. Ian Paisley to mark his release from prison with two other militant Protestants who were jailed with him. His speech made it clear that he and his supporters intend to continue their campaign against Roman Catholicism and the government of Captain Terence O'Neill.

The internationally known Chinese pianist Fu Tsang played at a charity performance in London despite rumours that his parents had committed suicide in China after persecution by the Chinese "Red Guard" movement. He left home 14 years ago to study music in Poland but in 1953 the Chinese government ordered him to return home. He refused, and came to settle in London, where he married the daughter of Yehudi Menuhin, another famous pianist.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer Mr. Callaghan, in a speech in the House of Commons, said that the severe economic measures introduced in July were having the desired impact. The balance of trade is improving, the drain on sterling reserves has stopped, and in the domestic economy there is an easing of pressure on costs and resources. The Commons are now debating the order enabling the government to make the freeze on wages and prices compulsory. The Economics Minister Mr. Stewart said that the powers which provide for fines and prison sentences will not be recklessly used. For the Opposition, Mr. McCloud said that the order was one of the greatest invasions of personal liberty that the House had ever been asked to sanction in peacetime.

The British Colonial Secretary has told the House that Gibraltar is unlikely to face any serious economic difficulties resulting from Spain's new restrictions on the Gibraltar frontier. A group of Conservative back-benchers have tabled a motion censuring him for his handling of the situation. It criticises him for what it calls his failure to announce any measures of support for the people of Gibraltar in meeting the emergency.

Britain's Minister of Disarmament, Lord Chalfont, has said that Britain is ready to give up her nuclear weapons if other countries will do the same. Speaking at the United Nations, he told non-nuclear countries that possession of such weapons is not a matter for pride, it is a ruinously expensive business which no nation should undertake lightly.

In London, police have found the car believed to have been used by the spy George Blake in his escape from prison a week ago. It was found abandoned in a street about two miles from the prison. Blake has been serving a 42 year sentence for passing secrets to the Russians.

THE BEATLES: NOT LONG AGO JOHN LENNON HAD HIS HAIR CHOPPED TO PLAY THE PART OF A SOLDIER IN A FILM. NOW ITS GEORGE, WHO WAS UNRECOGNISED WHEN HE FLEW IN TO LONDON AIRPORT RECENTLY FROM INDIA. HE HAD GROWN A MOUSTACHE ! IF THIS GOES ON THEY'LL SOON ALL BE UNRECOGNISABLE. IT MUST EVENTUALLY END UP WITH EITHER NO HAIR AT ALL, OR a la facon du FIDS, COMPLETELY HAIRY.

THE MOTOR SHOW, which ends today, has been described as a great success. Sir Patrick Hennessey, President of the Society of Manufacturers and Traders, says the Show has been more successful than expected. People have been more intent on buying than on just looking. Many of the manufacturers, who have been pessimistic about the show in the light of the present economic squeeze, are also happier. Rootes say they have had twice as many orders on their stand this year, and Vauxhalls say that their new Viva has attracted far greater interest and more genuine enquiries than any of their post-war models. From Jaguars comes the news of a £20 million order placed with their main North American distributors. The first cars will be shipped next week, to the United States and Canada. The new 430 saloons will be spearheading the major sales drive, together with the X-type sports car.

At the BMC Morris assembly plant near Oxford, 3,500 men have been laid off, because of an unofficial strike at the neighbouring Morris factory which makes car radiators. A company spokesman said the whole plant will be closed until further notice. At the Austin works in Birmingham car production has again stopped because of the strike by delivery drivers. More than 6,000 men have been laid off until Tuesday.

The government is to pay the legal costs of people who suffered as a result of the tragedy and who want to be represented at the enquiry. Witnesses will also get allowances for travelling expenses and reimbursement for any loss of earnings. The Tribunal is to hold a preliminary public meeting at Merthyr Tydfil next week.

The disaster fund has now reached a total of £40,000, and toys sent in response to Princess Margaret's request have been arriving in Aberfan by every post. More than 5,000 parcels are waiting to be distributed.

Her Majesty the Queen, with the Duke of Edinburgh, is visiting Aberfan today. It is a private visit, and only villagers and rescue workers are allowed in the area. The Queen and the Duke have talked to the parents of some of the victims, and heard firsthand accounts of the disaster. They are also visiting hospitals where the injured survivors are being treated.

The Birth Rate for England and Wales has continued to drop. Latest figures show that in the months of ~~XXXXXX~~ July, August and September the number of births, 316,000, were 1,000 less than for the same period last year and 3,000 less than for the year before. The Registrar General's office says it is a continuation of the decline which began in 1964.

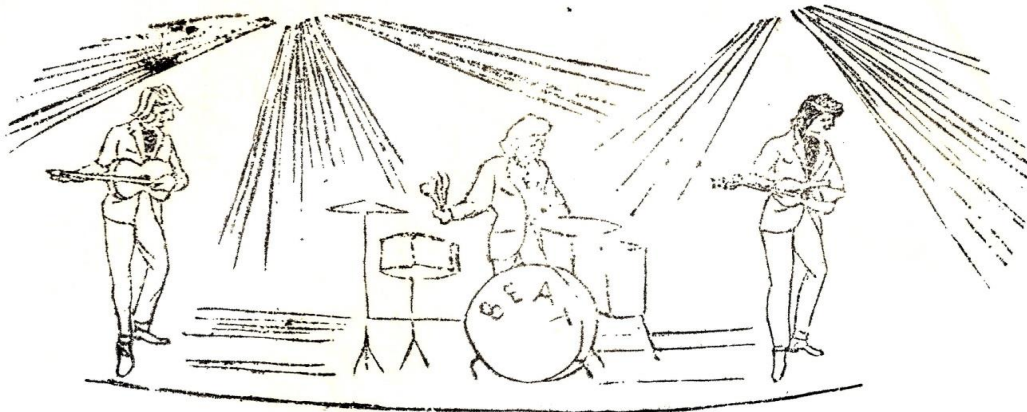

A draft charter on hospital services produced by the BMA suggests that financial control of hospitals should be transferred from the government to an independent body. On behalf of junior doctors, the charter repeats their demand for a minimum amount of time off duty and extra pay for extra work. "Never before have hospital doctors been so discontented. In less than twenty years British governments have reduced their profession to a state of seething unrest." (extract from the charter)

Princess Margaret has opened the £50,000 extension to the Liverpool Medical Institution. She addressed an audience which included many of Britain's top surgeons and physicians, and said that Liverpool, now internationally famous for the Beatles, had been equally well-known for many years for its contributions to medicine. The Institution's new extension, she said, would give a new incentive to medical research.

BEWARE.....

if FID on his return home falls into a confidence trap while enjoying himself with a young lady who is obviously also enjoying herself, this trap is always worked out well in advance by the girl with the help of her father. FID will have no way of telling that there is a trap until he has fallen into it. The trap is simple in operation and almost fool proof: at a prearranged time late in the evening the door will open and the girl's father will enter and catch FID doing what he should not be doing with such a nice young lady!

This trap has been known to backfire on the girl more than once, and the fault can always be blamed on the third party; an example of this is the time when a girl invited her boy friend around for the evening. she assured him that there were no other persons in the house and felt quite safe. At 12.30 her father should have come into the front room and discover his daughter with her blouse unfastened - evidence enough to outrage any parent. But the appointed moment came and went without interruption and the minutes ticked away. By 12.45 her blouse was under the sofa and still no father came to the rescue. By one O'clock this girl, hoist with her own petard, had forfeited her dearest possession. All because her father had become engrossed in an Agatha Christie mystery and lost track of the time!

But escape like this is rare and cannot be counted on, this girl eventually got her man with another trap (see next weeks BEWARE in Pengwinge).

Although FID can never tell what the result will be, if he does accept a young ladies invitation to go and spend the evening with her. BEWARE and if the worst comes to the worst, tell her that you would love to marry her, but B.A.S. have just written to ask you if you would like to spend another two years in the Antarctic and that you have already accepted. Get out as soon as possible and
